Zachary Quinto Nabs a Sprawling Noho Pad for $3.2 Million

Zachary Quinto—“Star Trek”’s new Spock who’s also known for his roles in “Heroes” and HBO’s “Girls”—just dropped $3.1625 million on a two-bedroom Noho pad with longtime boyfriend, model Miles McMillan. The 2,300-square-foot full-floor loft at 43 Great Jones Street was initially listed at $3.7 million in March 2014, but it suffered a few price chops before the LA transplants scooped it up. Their new home is the definition of a sleek and modern downtown pad, with walnut floors, oversized windows, and a stainless steel gourmet kitchen.

The home features a private elevator entrance directly into a 700-square-foot living/dining room combination served by four giant windows and custom built-in shelving. The chef's kitchen opens to the entertaining space and boasts a built-in cooktop and a walk-in pantry. Each of the two bedrooms feature a whitewashed brick accent wall and a spa-like renovated bathroom.

Moving into the home with the couple are their two rescue dogs, an Irish wolfhound terrier named Noah and a tiny terrier named Skunk. Meanwhile Quinto is still hard at work, with an upcoming appearance on NBC's "Hannibal" this season. The couple sold their California home this past November.
